Mino-maawanji'itiwag, is Saulteaux for "coming together in a good way." This November we will gather for a unique opportunity to learn, connect, and grow, reconciling the past and journeying towards Contextualized Ministry. Join Indigenous Jesus followers and people ministering in an Indigenous context.

November 2-3, 2018 at Living Hope Alliance Church, 3900 Arcola Ave. East, Regina

Have You Wondered?

- Can a person be both fully Indigenous and fully Christian? What does that look like?
- How can a non-Indigenous person mentor an Indigenous person?
- What does Indigenous leadership look like?
- What difference does it make that Jesus was a tribal boy raised under colonization?
- Why are Indigenous peoples marginalized in similar ways across the globe?
- Are there legitimate boundaries in contextualization? If so, who sets those boundaries?
- Is the Indigenous drum, smudging, or other traditional practices demonic?
- Why can't "they" get over it?

- How can Christian ministries present Jesus in a good or better way?

This is an opportunity to Come Together with Indigenous and non-Indigenous believers. Hearing from those who have journeyed before us, offering their perspectives on walking the Jesus Way, while being both Indigenous and Christian. This gathering is an opportunity to spend two days with Indigenous leaders learning how to come together in a good way!
